Showhouse & Gardens

We support and celebrate our partner, the Infant Welfare Society of Chicago.

Together, we can achieve positive change for a brighter future.

We're honored to lend a hand. Especially to those who already do.

As a financial partner who has valued meeting the needs of others for over 120 years, we draw inspiration from those who do it everyday. That's why we're extremely proud to support the Infant Welfare Society of Chicago.

WELCOME

FROM THE 2013 LAKE FOREST SHOWHOUSE & GARDENS CHAIRS

The Lake Forest Chapter of the Infant Welfare Society of Chicago is delighted you are joining us at the 15th biennial Showhouse & Gardens. This year's Showhouse brings together 35 exceptionally talented interior and landscape designers, who have worked together for months to transform empty design spaces into inspired expressions of personal style.

Built in 1916, this magnificent Italian villa is one of architect David Adler's masterpieces. Enjoy your tour as you explore each room in the house, visit the Boutique and then experience the beauty of the gardens.

In addition to our talented and dedicated designers, this Showhouse tradition would not be possible without the commitment of many special friends . . . the homeowner, the City of Lake Forest and all of the donors and volunteers who have helped bring this project to fruition. Thank you to Monica Pedersen, who so graciously helped our Infant Welfare Auxiliary celebrate its 100th birthday. To Arthur H. Miller and Craig Bergmann, thank you for your participation in a special evening co-sponsored with the Lake Forest Preservation Foundation.

Your attendance is what makes this project a true success. Funds raised from the 2013 Showhouse & Gardens will enable the Infant Welfare Society of Chicago to continue comprehensive health care services for Chicago's underserved children and women.

We hope you enjoy your visit!

THE AUXILIARY PROUDLY CELEBRATES

YEARS OF PARTNERSHIP WITH IWS

OUR 100TH BIRTHDAY . . . IT'S ABOUT HISTORY

"There are numerous organizations in the Chicago area that have been in existence for a century. And there are also many in our city that successfully raise funds for excellent causes. What makes the IWS Auxiliary unique is that we are probably the only volunteer organization partnering with a not-for-profit entity that has continuously supported it with fundraising for 100 years." . . . Lynette Paulsen, 2012-2013 Auxiliary President.

It's difficult to imagine how life was in 1913 when a group of dedicated women decided to support the Infant Welfare Society, a charity that was providing a safe source of milk for our city's infants. When the Auxiliary began its journey that year, the world was a far different place. Woodrow Wilson was the U. S. President, the Ford Motor Company introduced the first moving assembly line, the Federal Reserve was created and women suffragettes marched in Washington D. C. for equal rights under the law. Not surprisingly, virtually everything has changed since those dynamic, forward-thinking women came together 100 years ago to serve the Infant Welfare Society.

OUR 100TH BIRTHDAY . . . IT'S ABOUT THE AUXILIARY TODAY

With 670 members and 15 Chapters located throughout the city and suburbs, the Auxiliary raises money and awareness for IWS, as our Chapters host benefits in their respective communities. It is estimated that in the course of the last century, the Auxiliary has raised over $33 million for the clinic, and in today's dollars that figure equates to a staggering $113 million. In addition, the Auxiliary provides community outreach, sponsoring programs like the See Santa Party, Holiday Special Gifts (for Clinic families in particular need), educational enrichment programs and a Resale Shop (stocked and staffed by our volunteers) that offers quality merchandise at affordable prices.

OUR 100TH BIRTHDAY . . . IT'S ABOUT OUR MISSION

Our mission is unchanged today. Just as the Clinic has adhered to its goal of providing a healthy and productive life for women and children in the city, so has the Auxiliary remained true to its purpose of serving IWS by raising money, providing community outreach and increasing public awareness of the Clinic's services.

Monica Pedersen

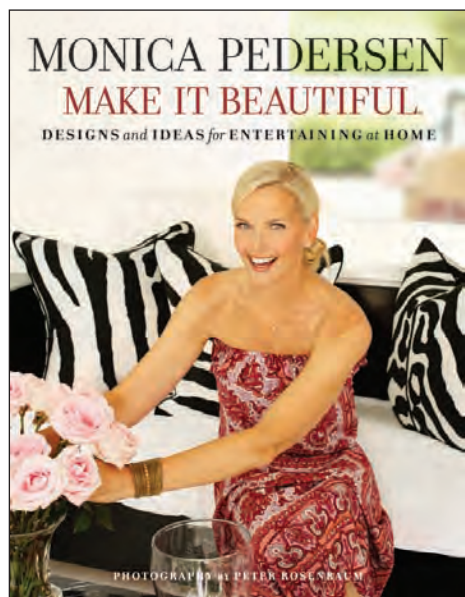

Described by the New York Times as the “radiant, high-energy mistress of ceremonies” at the recent Kitchen & Bath Industry show, Monica Pedersen’s enthusiasm for her career as an interior designer and television host is projected in all she does.

Her work as an interior design expert and television host can be seen as the Host of HGTV’s 2013 DreamHome, the HGTV’s 2013 Smart Home giveaway, House Hunters World tour episodes, House Hunter’s Great Escapes and Design Star All Stars. As a designer on HGTV’s hit television series, Designed to Sell, and Bang for Your Buck, Pedersen has quickly become a trusted expert showing viewers how to add value to their homes while working within a tight budget. Monica’s message to viewers is to Make It Beautiful on any budget!

Monica’s work has also been featured in publications like Traditional Home, Redbook, Town and Country, Good Housekeeping, InStyle, New York Times, USA Today, Domino, and Chicago Magazine. She was recently named by Chicago Magazine as one of its 50 Most Beautiful People.

As a member of the Sustainable Furnishings Council she actively supports the design community’s efforts to promote eco-friendly practices. She also designs for a cause, including the Chicago Children’s Advocacy Center, HGTV’s Change the World, and the 2009 and 2011 Infant Welfare Society of Chicago Lake Forest Showhouse & Gardens.

Building Strong Healthy Families

WELCOME . . .

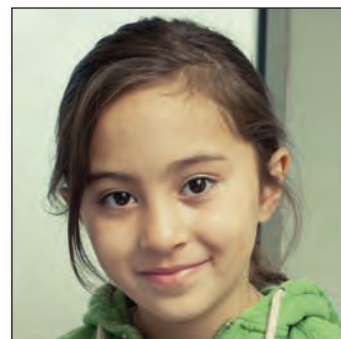

The Infant Welfare Society of Chicago has a clear vision for the future: healthy and productive lives for medically under served women and children. Thanks to your support, Infant Welfare begins its second century of service focused on keeping families healthy, and helping them to form good health habits that can be passed on to future generations.

At Infant Welfare, patients have access to an unmatched array of innovative primary and preventive health care services in a single state-of-the art facility. Our health care providers work together to develop medical and dental treatment plans that address the specific needs of each patient. Infant Welfare offers children, women, and families a variety of support services, such as individual and group counseling.

Our steadfast partner since 1913, the Auxiliary, celebrates its 100th birthday this year. The Auxiliary's extensive volunteer network and substantial financial support are critical in helping the Infant Welfare Society successfully meet the changing needs of our patients.

Infant Welfare still has more to accomplish. In spite of the turbulent health care landscape, we remain focused on the health and well-being of our patients who depend on Infant Welfare now more than ever. Our commitment to the continuous improvement of services and programs ensures that Infant Welfare will be equipped to help families effectively manage their physical and emotional challenges and teach them how to make better health choices.

The patients, staff and Board of Directors of Infant Welfare thank the sponsors, designers, volunteers and the Showhouse homeowners who have made the 2013 Lake Forest Showhouse & Gardens possible. The proceeds from this event allow the Infant Welfare Society to fulfill its mission, and make it possible for our patients to enjoy healthy, productive lives today and in the years to come.

Focus on the Future

MEDICAL SERVICES

Providing quality medical services to help women and children build healthy lives is the cornerstone of Infant Welfare's mission. Through the decades, our medical services have expanded to include three primary areas: pediatrics, optometry and women's health.

PEDIATRICS

DURING THE FISCAL YEAR 2012, 8,800 CHILDREN MADE 24,927 VISITS.

Infant Welfare provides comprehensive health services for children ranging from birth through age 18. Services are offered in three languages (English, Spanish, and Polish), and include well-child care, preventive care, immunizations, screenings, and health education.

WOMEN'S HEALTH

DURING THE FISCAL YEAR 2012, 2,258 WOMEN MADE 6,200 VISITS.

Women receive a variety of quality health care services that are well integrated with other Infant Welfare programs. Services include preventive and gynecological care, and prenatal and postpartum care. Early detection can save a woman's life.

Our medical team provides clinical breast exams, Pap smears, tuberculosis tests, STD screenings, HIV/AIDS tests, blood pressure checks, cardiology screenings, blood tests, basic sight and hearing checks, and mental health screenings. By educating women about health care, we can improve the health of individual families and ultimately the entire community.

OPTOMETRY

DURING THE FISCAL YEAR 2012, 2,953 CHILDREN RECEIVED EYE EXAMS, BEGINNING AT 6-8 MONTHS OF AGE.

The Infant Welfare Society is among only a handful of community clinics that offer affordable, in-house optometric services. Infant Welfare receives many patient referrals from local community centers that are unable to meet the needs of families.

Pediatric patients can receive their first eye examination at 6 to 8 months of age. Exams extend to patients up to the age of 18. Pediatricians recommend appropriate check ups based on a patient's needs. While the main focus is providing services to children, the Infant Welfare optometry clinic also treats adult women who are referred by their physicians due to health conditions that may manifest themselves in the eye, such as diabetes, hypertension, neurological conditions, and autoimmune disorders.

Infant Welfare Society

DENTAL SERVICES

DURING THE FISCAL YEAR 2012, 2,258 WOMEN MADE 6,200 VISITS.

Infant Welfare began providing pediatric dental services in 1970 and added orthodontics in 1991. One of the first community health centers to offer comprehensive dental services, Infant Welfare is committed to helping children build good oral health habits early in their lives. The focus on early childhood development allows Infant Welfare to encourage regular dental care during well-child visits, family counseling sessions, classes, and home visits. Preventive, restorative, and orthodontic services are administered by a team of highly trained, multilingual pediatric dentists, hygienists, and dental assistants.

FAMILY SERVICES

DURING THE FISCAL YEAR 2012, 241 CHILDREN RECEIVED COUNSELING SERVICES IN 2,435 VISITS.

The Family Services Program is integral to Infant Welfare's mission of providing services, support, and education in order to enhance the healthy development of children and women. The two components of Family Services, Child Development and Child and Adolescent Counseling, have been a part of Infant Welfare's services since 1924, and have expanded through the decades to meet the changing needs of children and families.

The services include identifying developmental delays and arranging for early interventions, working with infants and their mothers with postpartum depression, offering special assistance with behavioral issues in the preschool years, and counseling children from ages 3–18 years old with mental health diagnoses.

INFANT WELFARE SOCIETY'S NEW MEDICAL DIRECTOR

In 2012, Infant Welfare Society welcomed Daniel Vittum, M.D. as our new medical director. Dr. Vittum has an impressive background in family medicine, and is an asset to our very talented team of medical, dental, and mental health professionals.

"It's a real privilege to join the team at the Infant Welfare Society of Chicago. I've been aware of the high standard of care and community engagement of the health center for a number of years and am excited to be a part of an institution that values a comprehensive, holistic approach to patient well-being," says Dr. Vittum. "As a family physician, it is my hope to enhance family planning services and integrate family-based approaches to chronic illnesses such as obesity and diabetes prevention."

At Beam, we believe in giving back to the communities in which we do business. From our family to yours, we're proud to sponsor the Lake Forest Chapter of the Infant Welfare Society of Chicago.

David Adler

David Adler (1882-1940) designed homes and estates in the United States for almost four decades. Offering an enormous range of expression his designs were based on historical references, but with a simpler definition than homes which were built at that time in the traditional European model.

Born in the Midwest, he studied at Princeton, Munich's Polytechnic University and the Ecole des Beaux-Arts where he learned to design not in one style, but many. After traveling extensively through Europe and collecting ideas on which many of his American designs were based, he returned to the United States and worked with architect Howard Van Doren Shaw for one year before he set up his own practice.

He designed homes from Massachusetts to California, an eclectic mix, all in an elegant style which blended modern finishes with historical inspiration derived from his European travels. His interior designs responded to the demands of life at that time and featured new materials allowing him the ability to tailor his homes to the lifestyles of his clients.

He was a master of detail, skillfully placing a house on its site, designing the smallest detail - like an ornamental bootscraper, with a perfect sense of proportion. His sister, Frances Adler Elkins, one of the mid 20th century's greatest interior decorators, often worked in conjunction with Adler to create a superbly crafted, beautifully decorated and wonderfully scaled home for his clients.

Adler died at the age of 67 in Libertyville, Illinois. His homes have endured the test of time by adopting aristocratic old-world traditions to create American family homes for elegant living.

Showhouse History

David Adler designed this Italian Villa for Charles Burrell and Frances Alger Pike in 1916. The 15,000 square-foot villa is designed utilizing an entrance loggia and intricately paved courtyard that flows into spacious interior entertaining rooms.

Mr. Charles Pike came to Chicago in the late 19th century and became a successful real estate investor. He commissioned David Adler to build his house in 1915 and it was completed in 1917. Despite the grand exterior facade, the house was built for just two people. It is understood that the foundation and the sunken garden were hand-dug, taking 100 men over three months to complete.

Upon entering the magnificent 3-inch thick oak loggia door with large palazzo iron knob, you come upon one of Adler's most successful designs. The enclosed courtyard designed after a Florentine palazzo is encompassed by four Doric columns. Adler paved the courtyard with a variety of stones from the beachfront below, creating at the center a lovely star motif.

Through the double walnut doors is the foyer highlighted by arched ceilings. The gallery is fifty feet long with limestone Tuscan columns. The ceiling of the gallery is a series of arches meeting in pinnacles. The cut limestone of the staircase and surrounding walls anchors the wrought-iron railing that extends to the upper gallery, where a black and white cement checkered floor and a cove ceiling connects the bedroom wings.

The living room was built with an arch-domed ceiling. During renovations, the ceiling was dropped to fourteen feet and radiant heating was installed in the space above. Identical in size to the living room, the dining room served to balance the first floor. The entire first floor, with the exception of the morning room, is black terrazzo with a 1/2' brass inlaid band.

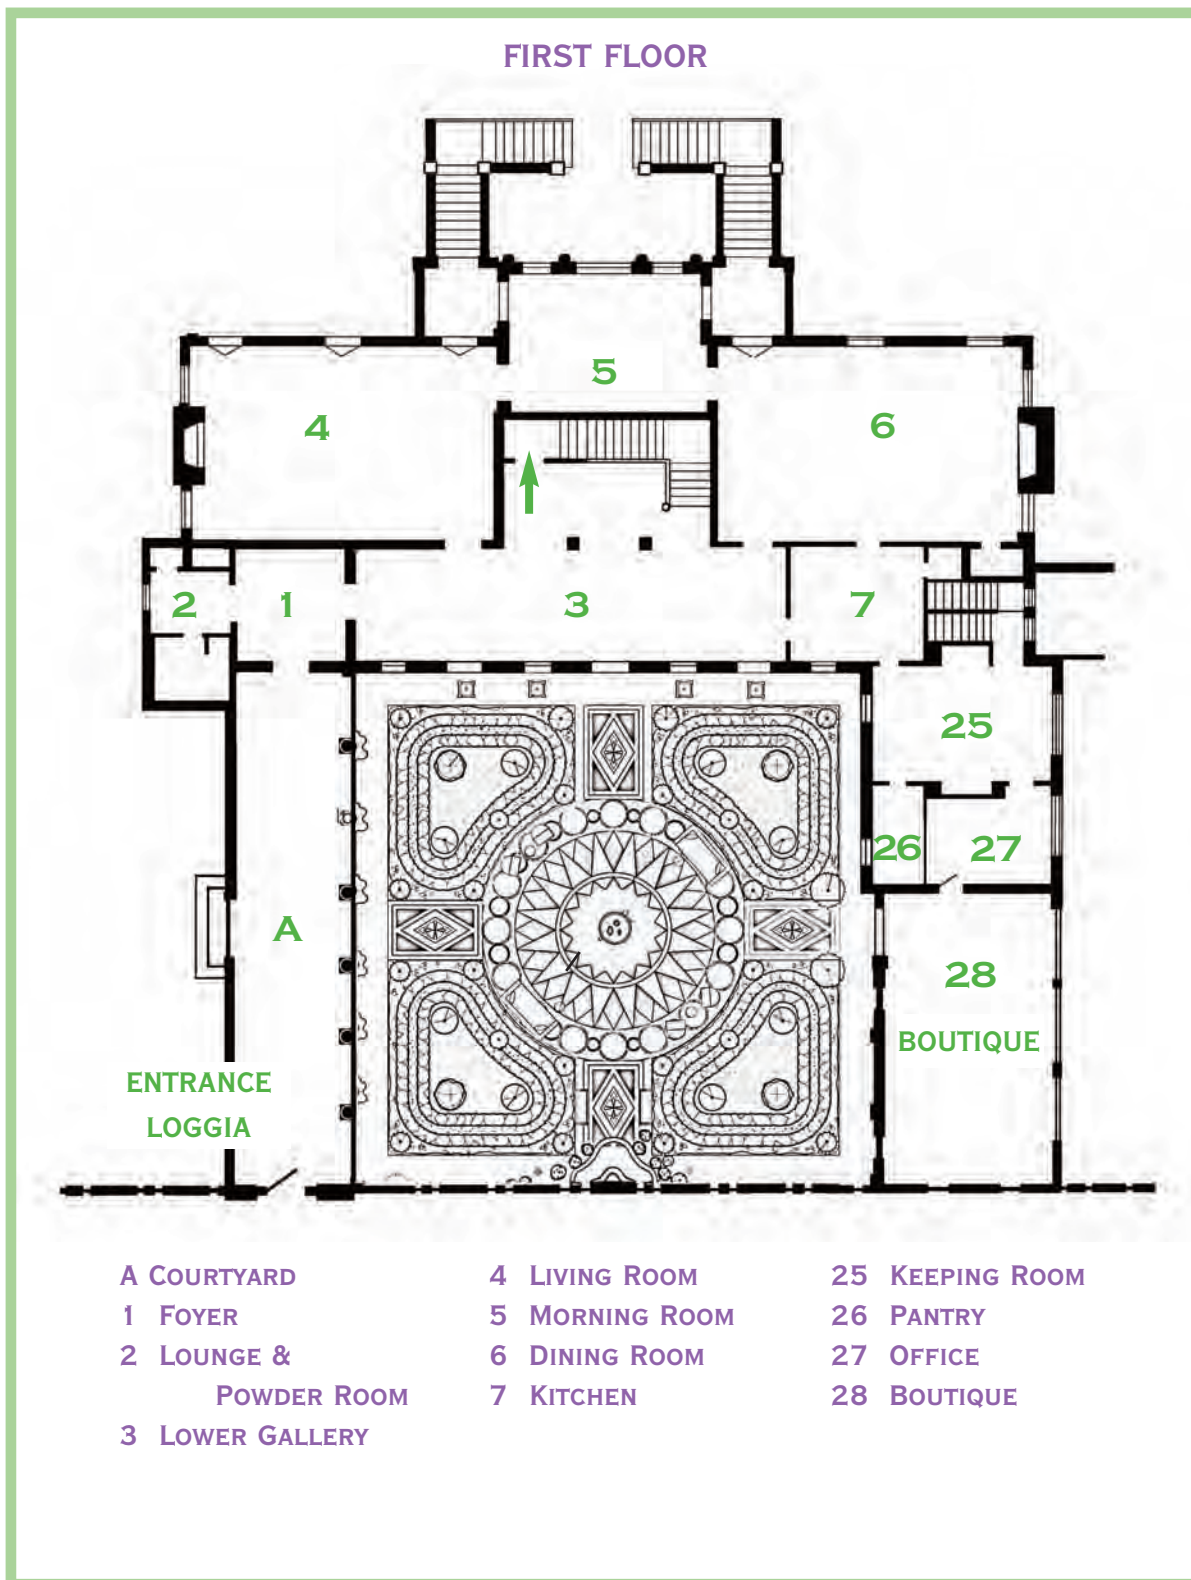

The morning room is between the living room and dining room, and is connected by generous French doors. A tall vaulted ceiling and white travertine marble floor accentuate the view toward the lake and the sunken gardens. French doors open onto the balustrade landings lead to a pair of stairs leading down to the gardens.

The original kitchen is highlighted by Delft tile lining the walls. On the west wall is an opening for a commercial stove. Directly opposite is the opening for an industrial refrigerator. On the south wall, under the window, was a vintage 1917 ten foot sink on legs. What is now the office was the original servant's dining room.

Courtyard

A

This idyllic wind-protected courtyard acts as front entry hall and pleasure garden for this extraordinary home. Exceptional furnishings upholstered in sumptuous color provide for romantic conversation and relaxation. The central space is ideal for entertaining surrounded by beds of seasonal flowers and shrubs emulating an Italian villa court filled with color, form, and texture in spring. All embellished by the sounds of the waters of the restored fountain and graced by the original garden's ornamentation.

Foyer

The Entry Foyer is a beautifully proportioned hall with dark terrazzo floors, rigorous symmetry and a vaulted ceiling. Building on David Adler's classic architecture, the designers wrapped the space in a graphic black and white wallpaper to create the impression of soaring in the clouds. The Atelier Fornasetti paper is a play on scale, magnifying the sky that is so often found in prints over the ages.

A pewter-leaved vault extends the room's light, airy quality. An exceptional rock crystal star, carved from a single block of Brazilian quartz, lights the space. Classic but inventive, ethereal but graphic, quiet but striking, the Entry Foyer is a dramatic introduction to this year's showhouse.

Lounge & Powder Room

By painting the space high-gloss green and adding gold accents to detail the molding, the incredible architecture of the paneled Lounge area is highlighted. For added interest and depth the ceiling has been transformed with a faux malachite finish. The same soothing green used for the paneling is carried into the adjoining powder room through the classic Acanthus leaf-patterned wallpaper. Silk and velvet fabrics and traditional elements juxtapose with modern Lucite and geometric patterns to keep the space both elegant and fresh.

Gallery

The Gallery showcases classic design elements of architect David Adler, its ceiling heightened by a series of arches meeting in pinnacles with two 16' Ionic columns. Anchored between the columns is a black baby grand piano with unique conversation areas on either side. Near the end of the space, a grand, cut-stone stairway adds a regal feel with a custom runner highlighting the three landings. The Gallery also provides ample room for significant art and sculpture collected from around the world and accentuates the beauty of David Adler's "Great American Home" architecture. French doors run the length of the room, enhanced by 10 foot drapery panels. The conversation areas are united by sophisticated lines and luxurious silks, velvets, linens and hair-on-hide. Soft colors and vibrant accents, classic furniture and comfortable seating result in an elegant and inviting space for entertaining, conversing or relaxing with a book.

Complimenting David Adler's passion for symmetry, the Living Room exudes comfortable elegance. Influenced by the Italian architecture, this space is light and layered with rich textures. A neutral palette of beige is enhanced by shimmering metallic, soft blue-green tones, and the intriguing addition of black and white accents. The hand-applied wall texture has a luminous quality, with depth and character, providing a sophisticated backdrop. Gracious furnishings balance current clean lines and antiques with an art deco influence. The tapestry, an element often found in Italian villas, is a nod to the past. Traditional elements, paired with the modern black and white striped rug give an updated look. Both bold and gentle, this space is harmonious, warm, and inviting.

Morning Room

Combining the views and David Adler's classic architecture, the Morning Room fulfills the designer's dream of a room with endless possibilities.

Her vision for the space: to respect the architecture, be practical and versatile, yet lavish and stunning in every way. A mix of refined and casual fabrics, furnishings and accessories sets the stage for a menagerie of purpose: holding forth a crowd or a single visitor with ease, inviting royalty to tea or lounging around in a robe and slippers. Whether used morning, noon or night, this is a room with a purpose.

Dining Room

Occidental meets Oriental describes a room appointed in the Grand Tour manner. Rich elements collected from around the globe are arranged in this modern palazzo, nodding subtly to legendary tour-de-force impresarios Rothschild, Medici, and Duquette. Above the bar, the whole is anchored by a new master painting of heroic scale and subject by artist Matthew Lawrence Almy.

Continental antiques and objects blend harmoniously among iconic pieces for an exuberant and confidently edited result. The table is set with the designer's collection of Moroccan tagine coordinated with Art Deco period design crystal and sterling silver. Gem studded napkin rings accent the Arabian theme for an intimate dinner setting.

Serving as the grand entryway to the home's formal gardens and lake views, the Garden Room invites lounging and entertaining. The 1960s design style creates a feeling of stylish relaxation. Quiet ivory walls and the lush area rug are splashed with a palette of vibrant yellows and oranges that capture the sunrise over the lake. The furnishings are a mix of 19th century and mid century finds, balanced by sleek lines of today's pieces.

French doors lead to the gardens. David Adler's symmetrical arches encourage entry to the Wine Alcove and Cocktail Lounge. Hints of the 1960s reflect both the formal and the casual ambience of these special garden level spaces.

The characteristic eclecticism of architect David Adler and his sister, interior designer Frances Elkins, inspired the diverse mix of elements from the past and those with a contemporary vibe.

A geometric theme plays a unifying role repeating shapes and patterns. To offset shiny surfaces the floor is covered in a taupe-gray textured sisal carpet and layered with a chocolate shearling rug.

A clean-lined acrylic console, paired with white linen ottomans and a large floor mirror with hide-wrapped frame complete the "anteroom." The "loo" area boasts a matte white toilet and sink juxtaposed with an organic sink faucet in polished nickel and chocolate. The off-center window is camouflaged with a double-sided, asymmetrical stepped mirror suspended from the ceiling. Lighting is simple yet elegant.

RANDY HELLER PURE & SIMPLE INTERIOR DESIGN

For the Lady's Dressing Room and Bath, the goal of the designer was to develop a contemporary approach to the footprints left behind by David Adler. A creamy, yogurt-like finish on the walls creates a canvas. Closet doors enhanced with beveled mirror visually expand the space and add formality.

A pair of Deco chairs are upholstered in an updated pattern with tones that flow between the two rooms. The ceiling fixture is to provide a horizontal line that coordinates the direction and size of the spaces. An iconic mirror and busts are reminiscent of the past. Window treatments are kept simple. Wall-to-wall sisal provides texture.

Hand-painted, silver leaf wallpaper was popular with Adler so the designer has repeated its use. The newly installed fireplace creates a focal point. Calcutta Marble on the walls blends with the existing travertine stone.

Silver and gold framed artwork and the bench, upholstered in a neutral palette with striking beaded detail complete the look.

SOUTHERN MANNER ANTIQUES AND DESIGN

The linen room's classic design provides an elegant environment for luxurious Pratesi linens.

This quaint space combines traditional chinoiserie elements with transitional, graphic fabric and wall covering to create a fresh, current feel. Antique reproduction botanicals, the whimsical floral chandelier and vivid green accents introduce elements of nature to this cozy room. Vintage furniture is hand-painted and upholstered and a textured floor covering completes the look.

Offering a fresh and inspiring respite for visiting family and friends is the Guest Suite. Custom, elongated beds were designed to float in the room but still allow for an otherwise simple floor plan. The chunky sisal rug brings casual warmth and comfort to the room. An antique wardrobe provides storage and a reclaimed Chinese housing timber serves as a writing desk. White painted woodwork maintains the character of the room, while providing a clean backdrop for carefully-curated works of art and the sculptural light fixture.

The Guest Bedroom is a study in contrast and tranquility. To compliment the stature and character of the house, the designer added panel mouldings, doubled the size of the base and built a bold, modern fireplace surround over the existing diminutive one. Southern and eastern exposures saturate the room with light and inspired the color palette of gunmetal grey metallic grass cloth and crisp white trim. It's calm, yet high in contrast; rich with texture and form, but little pattern.

The furniture is carefully edited and balanced, combining antiques with modern, smooth with textured, light with dark, Louis XV with Louis XVI. Focus is on the Louis XVI bed in a gilded fruitwood finish with fluted corner posts, ribbon and reed frame, and a grand tailored canopy of white linen. Modern white lacquered night tables with scallop fronts and silver tassels are chic and flirty. The gilded, black lacquered Louis XV desk provides a masculine, yet curvaceous anchor to the room, balancing the abstract black and white prints on the opposite wall. Two low Louis XVI style slipper chairs, dressed in neutral linen, flank the black lacquered fireplace. A white lacquered table provides a surface for books and magazines so the arrangement is comfortable and functional. An Avignon chaise provides the perfect resting place to enjoy the view. A final layer of colorful accents in orange and pink adds vitality to the room.

Created as an art installation area for a family of collectors, the artist/designer hand painted soft stripes to unify a series of disjointed halls, landings and stairs. Stripes of several Farrow & Ball whites on a neutral base are varied in their placement, width and arrangement.

The Gallery Hallways and Back Stair Hall is a space where the family can assemble and edit art collections, sculpture, antiques, family history and family portraits. Former linen presses have been repurposed as refreshment stations for gallery openings or children's parties.

The former house manager's alcove, off the stair hall, now serves as a curator's den where the family can organize and research the provenance of their pieces, and package or unwrap artwork.

A chic and inviting jewel box, the Girl's Bedroom is a fun place for a girl of any age to call her own. White and silver peony wallpaper is reminiscent of old Hollywood elegance and the perfect backdrop for the raspberry color palette with tangerine accents. A custom-designed, painted and handcrafted armoire replaces a cupboard that served as the room's original closet.

Keeping Room

The estate's original kitchen has been repurposed as a Keeping Room and retains several original details to honor the history of the residence. Delft tiles highlight the former stove opening. Directly opposite is the alcove, which contained an industrial ice box. Ceiling details are reminiscent of an inverted ship's bottom with beams resembling the keel and ribs.

Designed as a place for all facets of family living, inspiration was drawn from coastal summer vacations. Weathered furniture finishes and the colors of sand, sky and water bring the outdoors in. The easy-care painted floor, with its subtle shell motif was inspired by the Delft tiles, inviting wet, sandy feet and reflecting light. Subtle nautical accents can be seen in the dining ottomans' boat cleat handles, linen net sheers and organic accessories. Whether enjoying family dinners, playing with games or puzzles, relaxing or reading, this space invites fond memories of life's simple pleasures.

KIMBALL DERRICK

“A pantry can invoke all manner of pleasant things -visual delights, memories of taste and smell, perhaps even security and comfort”

- Catherine Sieberling Pond

Untouched by time, the Pantry presented an opportunity for the designer to restore its intended purpose and function. Originally a room of great importance for its practical uses: cleanliness, storage of summer's bounty, and the safety of the homeowner's china, cookware, and utensils, it was also a place of children's raids on the cookie jar and memories of pungent aromas of drying herbs and spices. As the most requested feature in today's kitchen design, the updated Pantry is now ready to serve the needs of a modern family.

Originally labeled as the “mud room,” the importance of the back entrance has dramatically increased with modern family living because it is often used on a regular basis. Glamorous pieces, finishes and colors have been added to the Rear Foyer for daily enjoyment. By pairing European antiques and vintage furniture with modern elements, the grandeur of a foyer overlaps with the functionality of a traditional mudroom.

The space has been designed to fit organizational needs such as storage, filing, and washing, yet retains its stylish look. A French Industrial mail sorting station keeps everything organized-- from keys, to shoes, to mail. The chevron indoor/outdoor rug is reminiscent of the brick pattern on the front walkway yet glamour has been infused into the room with an ornate gold-leaf chandelier, gilded antique Rococo sofa and textured drapery panels. Dramatic off-black walls and gold tea paper ceiling are unexpected. The inexpensive penny floor is durable and the bar-height counter is a perfect stopping point to catch a view of the side yard or read the mail.

Entrance Courtyard

The Entrance Courtyard is designed in the Venetian palazzo style surrounded by tall, thick walls. The courtyard was one of David Adler's most successful outdoor spaces. Paving it with a variety of stones from the beachfront below, he created interplay of color, texture, and shape. At the center of the courtyard, a large star in grades of black and dark tan is connected to four evenly spaced rectangular stone paths that separate four corner planting beds-which Adler fit, with the precision of a jigsaw puzzle, into the courtyard.

A fifty foot long loggia, entered through a massive wooden door, leads guests from the street to the house entrance. Two wrought-iron gates lead to the north courtyard, to the south is a door leading to the original service courtyard. In the 1940s, the service courtyard was converted to a 4 car garage. Originally, the garage was on nearby Woodbine Road.

RALPH RODNEY ROOT LANDSCAPE ARCHITECT

Ralph Rodney Root (1884-1964) was the designer of A. Watson Armour's Elawa Farm gardens and was a collaborator with the firm of Beaux-Arts trained architects David Adler and Robert Work. As a partner with Noble P. Hollister, Root also worked with the David Adler firm on the garden of the Charles B. Pike Italian villa, the William McCormick Blair Crabtree Farm in Lake Bluff and the Robert McCormick Cantigny estate. His work highlighted the Chicago suburban formal garden phenomenon of the Beaux-Arts tradition in the early nineteenth century.

Trained at Cornell and Harvard, Root then served as head of the landscape architecture program at the University of Illinois in Urbana, 1912-1918. In 1916 he offered a summer program at Lake Forest College under the sponsorship of the Garden Club of Illinois, centered on Lake Forest. In 1919, the Garden Club of America visited Chicago's North Shore, guided by Root's book of twenty four garden sketch plans. That book is archived at the Lake Forest College today.

The Gardens

David Adler planned the sunken garden in collaboration with Illinois landscape architect Ralph Rodney Root. The grandest of Adler's lakefront gardens, it would be exceeded in magnificence only by the allee at the Adler designed Castle Hill in Massachusetts, perhaps Adler's most famous work.

Double doors from the morning room and the dining room lead to the east gardens. The stairs leading to the gardens are cut-stone with circular balustrades. The stairs lead down into the formal gardens surrounded by 12' walls constructed of Roman brick laid flat with a cut-stone base and top. The walls were covered with stucco to make them look like concrete.

The Sunken Garden is 100' long and 100' wide within the walls. Continuing toward the lake there is a slope reaching down to a retaining wall before the bluff. The bluff is approximately 150' high and ends at the beach. Originally the property included a boat launch and dock at the beach. Serious storm damage in 1973 and again in 1976 took the entire structure away.

The Sunken Garden was planted along north and south border with a Grecian key motif of buckthorn. Borders were planted with hydrangeas, roses, peonies. Along the sunken garden wall there are 14 statues. Four statues represent the seasons and the other 10 statues represent the Humanities. These old Roman statues were brought from Europe and each has its name engraved on the pedestal.

Walking up the stairs from the sunken garden to the north garden there is a formal pattern layout surrounded by evergreens and walks with gravel and cut-stone curbing. Originally there was a center area for flowers and a sundial in front of the cut-stone reflecting pool. At the north end of the reflecting pools there is a Roman canticle with a statue of a lion, which is a fountain with water spouting out of its mouth.

NORTH SHORE TURF INDUSTRIES, LTD.

Streetscape

B

North Shore Turf Industries envisions the entrance landscape as a bridge from the character of Lake Road into the grand spaces of this David Adler masterpiece. Some of the plant materials recall those found in more natural spaces of nearby historic Forest Park and ravines, but their arrangement foreshadows the formal designs found inside. The design of the hardscape draws visitors up to the courtyard entrance. The star motif is found in many of David Adler's works. The plantings create soft steps up to the original brick wall, and will have visual interest throughout the year. Bedding plants are chosen to complement the soft tones found in the brick walls. The whole speaks of an understated elegance. The urns offer a splash of color and can be changed through the seasons.

FERTILE LTD

C

The south garden is a collaboration between Fertile LTD and Brent Riechers Landscape. Our garden design was inspired by the grandeur of the estate and the endless views of Lake Michigan. In response to these strong elements, the south garden offers a place of respite, reflection, and transition. It is in an intimate corner of the property, and affords beautiful views of the lake. When entering the garden, the viewer's senses should be stimulated by the color of the garden. This assists in the transition from the house to the lake and its views. To accomplish this, the existing structure of the garden was enhanced with a variety of evergreen and deciduous trees and shrubs to provide a background for a colorful bed of annuals which provide seasonal color and interest. The annuals are a combination of plants with colored leaves of different textures, and flowering annuals. The view of the lake is preserved by using low growing plants along the east side of the garden.

Sunken Garden

D

In the rear of the home, the panel of lawn below the walls provides a functional space from which to view the lake and to entertain in summer. Carved out in part to allow for a greater view of the lake, the sunken garden and expanse of lawn contained within the masonry walls, capped with the series of statues, provide the perfect framework for the vista.

Our boxwood parterre is a reflection of the original garden design by Ralph Root in conjunction with Adler. A fleur-de-lis influenced pattern has been cut into the lawn, expressly for viewing from the house above.

SCHMECHTIG LANDSCAPE COMPANY

Stairway Garden

At the rear of this grand estate exists a double central staircase complete with limestone steps and decorative balustrade railings. Both staircases descend and converge on a central landing area at the beginning of the east sunken garden.

Between these two staircases is the outdoor space that Schmechtig Landscape Company sought to improve. At the bottom of this space exists a set of double hand crafted wood doors which are on central axis between the house, sunken garden and framed view of the lake. We felt it was important to remove the white aluminum storm doors that concealed its original splendor. We also felt that the existing contemporary paving was not age appropriate with the historic nature of the home and too wide to give enough planting space to soften the heavy limestone walls.

As a result, we removed the storm doors, removed the contemporary bricks and replaced them with cut natural stone in a diamond pattern which echoes an existing theme found in adjacent details. To further enhance this space, we installed a symmetrical planting scheme which frames and balances the views from the house and back toward it. This planting scheme incorporates two upright ornamental trees, broadleaf evergreen hedges, diamond shaped flower beds, textural groundcover and classical urns with spring floral arrangements.

Architect David Adler's Nautilus motif, found in the limestone hardscape detailing throughout the rear gardens, has inspired a lookout seating area and spring garden with Nautilus-styled radial limestone and shell pathways. The historical peony bed along the balustrade has been expanded to include spring flowering bulbs, perennials and annuals in a crisp blue, violet and white color palette accented by waves of pure yellow. Flowering ornamental shrubs and boxwood define the nautilus 'shell' chambers and a softscape hedge along the bluff edge creates a sense of cozy enclosure as one sits and enjoys the morning sunshine overlooking Lake Michigan.

GARDENS IN PROGRESS

North Fountain

G

The North Terrace of the property is a small garden planted with herbs, vegetables and early spring flowers. Large containers anchored with fruit trees and roses complete the planting scheme. Accents of green can be found in the groundcover, bowwood and fern plantings.

The Green Man Statue, the focal point of this garden, is an ancient symbol of renewal, creativity and the coming spring.

Perennials: bleeding hearts, spring anemones, foxglove, columbine and forget-me-nots.
